CENTRAL GARAGE COMPANY

In this issue appears the advertisement of the Central Garage Company, who handles the Overland car. Mr. Bartlett, who manages this agency, is one of Maysville's progressive enthusiasts and that he believes in and will do his share towards the future prosperity of the city is clearly shown by his recent contract with his principles, wherein he undertakes to dispose of 30 cars during the coming year, and this he expects to do, without doubt.

MAD DOG

The mad dog that caused so much excitement in Bourbon county was killed by Mr. Baker Wood in front of his home in Forest avenue last evening. Just a few minutes before he shot the animal his two children were playing with it, but it exhibited no temper towards them, being affected after the children left it. The head of the brute will be sent to Paris and examined by a Pasteur expert of that city.

INFANT DIES

Margaret Burdette, the ten-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Roff, of Cincinnati, died at the home of her parents Monday, after a brief illness of brain fever caused from teething. Mrs. Roff was formerly Miss Nellie Guiffroye, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Guiffroye, of this city, and the infant's remains will be brought here and interred in the Washington Cemetery.

BANKERS HOLD SIXTH ANNUAL CONVENTION

J. Foster Barbour Welcomes Delegates Who Carry Out interesting and Instructive Program

N. S. Calhoun Elected President, and Most Successful Convention of Group Nine Closes With Trip On River.

The sixth annual meeting of Group Nine of the Kentucky Bankers' Association was held on Thursday in the auditorium of Beechwood Park, which was overflowed with delegates. The hall was artistically decorated with flags and streamers, the national colors predominating, and presented a very attractive appearance as the delegates assembled promptly at 10:30.

The meeting was called to order by President C. H. Patterson, cashier Mt. Sterling Bank, Mt. Sterling, Ky., and the following interesting and instructive program was carried out:

Appointment of Committees.

At 12:30 a delightful lunch was served by the committee of ladies representing the banks of this city, in the spacious assembly room of the Maysville Street Railway car barn. Mrs. H. C. H. Rees, who waited upon the tables and generously served the following menu:

Mr. C. H. Patterson, who responded for the delegation, chose for his subject, "Maintaining the Standard."

We appreciate very much, indeed, this warm welcome recorded by Mr. Barbour, and on behalf of the Executive Committee and the members of Group Nine, I desire to thank the bankers of Maysville for the kind invitation which brings us here today. The warm welcome was fully expected and has been clearly in evidence

The thing uppermost in the mind of every banker is the Federal Reserve System, which is being installed in the country, the provisions of which will be fully presented at this session. It is a matter of regret that this system has not up to this time attracted the state banks and trust companies, which comprise the majority of the banking capital of the country, about 99 per cent of the membership being from the national banks and only 1 per cent from the state banks and trust companies. But the system must not be condemned on this account. When the national banking system was adopted it was a long time before it had any appreciable growth. It never did encompass a majority of the banking capital of the country, but it proved a great blessing, and the circulation was a fortunate retreat from the old state bank circulation.

So, it may reasonably be predicted that the Federal Reserve System will directly or indirectly prove a benefit to all the banking capital of the country, an important factor in the promotion of the growth of commercial and international business, the safety valve to preserve the country from disastrous panics and a harbinger of prosperity to all. Again, assuring you of a "Glad Welcome," I will release your attention, that the exercises of the convention may begin.

There then followed a general discussion of matters of interest to bankers in general, which was participated in by many delegates and many interesting and instructive talks were delivered, after which the convention adjourned to the steamer Homer Smith and enjoyed an excursion on the Ohio river, in the course of which the construction work at Dam No. 33, above the city, was inspected.

Mr. Barbour said,

It was on this spot six years ago that Group No. Nine of Kentucky Bankers inaugurated its sessions.

We are fortunate in having a second Group convention in Maysville within six years. We want you to understand our "hatch-string is always out," and as often as we find it convenient to hold your sessions in Maysville, you will receive the "glad hand."

We welcome you heartily today.

We thank your committee for having secured as speakers men gifted in the topics on which they are to discourse, and for the privilege of listening to their words of wisdom. Every member of this Group present was to be congratulated.

I do not propose to take up very much of your time beyond expressing the delight of the bankers of Maysville for the privilege of being your hosts today. I will make brief mention of anti-slavery bankers. It may interest some of you to know that the first bank established within the boundaries of this Group was in the city of Maysville eighty years ago, a branch of the Bank of Kentucky, with a capital of $450,000 and a circulation which at times was in excess of $600,000. Later, a branch of the Farmers Bank was established here with a large capital and circulation. This will indicate to you the prominence of Maysville as a banking point at that early day, as it has continued to be to the present time.

This community has been blessed in never having experienced a bank failure. You may wonder how the banks used their money. The bank building stimulated many other things that I will mention for my purpose, the production of cattle, hogs and hemp.

I remember the pride I experienced as a school boy in seeing in the geographies that Maysville was the greatest hemp market in the world.

It is hard to realize this, as now it is a forgotten industry in this county.

At that time there were several hemp factories here. One of the contributing causes to the abandonment of its production was the labor of breaking the hemp, which had to be done by hand. It has been a matter of surprise that no machinery was ever successfully invented for breaking hemp.

Leher, since the days of slavery, has refused to use the hand-brake, which was very arduous. This and the introduction of jute and foreign hemp disposed of its production in this country.

Hogs were driven on foot to Virginia and the Carolinas, and packing establishments helped the product to New Orleans by flatboats, which market at one time received our tobacco, while cattle were slaughtered in Maysville and shipped to England.

The better facilities for raising stock in the West finally did away with these enterprises.

Flatboating was a great industry for several decades before the Civil war.

A number of plow factories, manufacturing sugar and cotton plows, carried their wares to the Southern community, retailing them along the coast with repair shops fitted up on the wharves to mend the plows previously sold.

When the money was realized from the various products, the banks received some of it and it was re-invested for their advances in cotton bales on New York and Liverpool, thus keeping the assets of the banks in a liquid shape and furnishing the gold for the state bank notes when they were returned for redemption.

You must excuse the garrulity of one of your number whose memory is stretched back to the olden time and who likes to recount the old conditions.

But we must come to the practical usefulness of today.

Say, farmer folks, it's worth your while to turn the paper sideways to see the picture of the "New" Tiger Tobacco Setter. It's a wonder, Chuck full of new improvements, and the best tobacco transplanter on the market today. Drop in and let's talk it over.

ENFORCE THE ANTI-SPLITTING ORDINANCE.

Good breeding forbids one to spit in public and the real gentleman finding it necessary, retires from the presence of others. Constant spitting is nothing more than an ugly habit, for it is not necessary to spit nearly so often as men do. Even one who chews need not spit at every other movement of the jaws and certainly prouisiones spitting anywhere and everywhere without regard to the comfort or health of others is inexcusable and should be stopped.

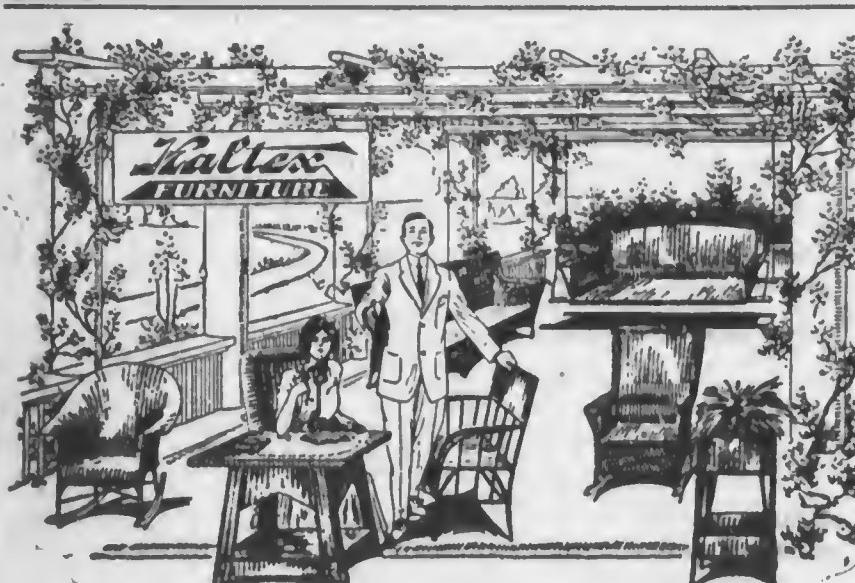

While it would seem that the people would have more civic pride than to mar and disfigure the appearance of their public pass ways, and that they would realize the danger to health and by this filthy habit and put a stop to it, without being forced to do so by the authorities, we must remember that the man who has nothing better to do than stand around on the street corners and spit on the sidewalk can not be expected to understand what civic pride means nor does he give a rap for the inconvenience to others or for the health of the community.

To reason with such a man is so much time wasted, for were he able to reason or even capable of understanding what reason means, he would not have to be told not to spit on the sidewalks, and an effort to explain the dangers arising from this habit would prove even more useless.

It is, however, not necessary to argue or reason with the sidewalk spitters, for every community has long since recognized the unrighteousness of the habit and the danger to public health arising from its indulgence, and has adopted prohibitory measures. In this respect Maysville has kept abreast of the times, and has adopted such an ordinance that the passing of a law prohibiting an evil is but a first step towards its elimination, and if not properly enforced is worse than no law at all, for such procedure allows a continuation of the particular evil and teaches a disrespect for all laws in general.

There seems to have been little effort to enforce the anti-spitting ordinance, and while the Council has, as a lawmaking body, done its duty in adopting such an ordinance, it should now, as a governing body, see that the police properly enforce it.

Demosthenes was about to go down to the shore and perform his customary stunt of talking with his mouth full of pebbles to improve his enunciation. On the way an idea assailed him. "What's the use of fussing with a lot of silly pebbles," he growled, "when I can get the same effect on the Galacium battlefields?" And he said Snizlyszmehrgl six times in rapid succession.

It is said that the "Chin-Chin" dresses for spring wear are intended especially for afternoon teas. Probably the idea is to have the dresses match the conversation.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, the suffragist leader, was praising in New York the recruiting work of the English suffragists.

"Englishmen now," she said, "have a better understanding of their suffragist sisters. The average Englishman's idea of a suffragist in the past is well illustrated in an anecdote.

"Dear me," said one woman to another, "here's a wife just been arrested for horsewhipping her husband in a public theater!"

"Quite right," the other woman, a suffragist, answered firmly. "Quite right, too, to arrest her. These painful duties should never be performed in public, but only in the sacred privacy of the home."

To often the bed room is considered as just a place to sleep; a part of the house that does not require any special attention as to lighting because it is seen only by members of the family.

Yet correct lighting arrangement—the installation of harmonious chandeliers, in a manner to give effective illumination—will make this one of the most used rooms of the whole house—a cozy home in itself.

By the use of a simple, but graceful chandelier in the center of the room, and two or more wall brackets of harmonious design, the bedroom is fitted to serve as a study or sewing room.

Then, too, a wall bracket placed at each side of the dresser adds much to the ease and pleasure of dressing. Only when she has a perfect light by which to make her toilet can Milady be absolutely certain that every little detail is as it should be.

BRIDGE AT PORTSMOUTH

C. & O. Will Also Extend Railroad From Waverly To Valley Crossing.

The Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Company announces that contracts have been let, through a subsidiary company (The Chesapeake & Ohio Northern Railway), for the building of a bridge over the Ohio river near Portsmouth, O., and about thirty miles of new line forming a connection between the Hocking Valley railway and the Chesapeake & Ohio railway by a trackage arrangement with the Norfolk & Western railway, from Waverly, O., to Valley Crossing, O., a distance of about sixty-two miles. The cost of the new line, including the bridge, is estimated to be about $4,500,000, of which $4,000,000 is on deposit with trustee, being proceeds of sale of Kuhn & Michigan stock.

The new line will be of great advantage to the coal mines tributary to the Chesapeake & Ohio railway, insuring a more expeditious movement of coal destined to the northwest via the lakes, and also insuring a large tonnage to the Hocking Valley railway. The new Hocking Valley coal pier at Toledo has great capacity and is unsurpassed on the lakes, and the Chesapeake & Ohio lines will occupy a more commanding position than ever before. It is hoped that the bridge and new construction will be completed by November 1, 1916.

FLORENCE WADSWORTH

Now Appearing In Grand Opera Before New York Audiences.

The New York American of May 25, has the following to say of Miss Florence "Wallace":

"At the Standard theater last night the Van den Berg-Conger Opera Company presented a most creditable revival of Robert Planquette's charming comic opera, 'The Chimes of Normandy,' with an unusually efficient cast of principals and a chorus that sings with exuberance."

The revival of this standard favorite served to introduce Carrie Reynolds, a prima donna of unusual ability, in the principal role, that of Serpollet, a character which requires artistic treatment in every phase.

Paul Hyde Davies, the Grenadier of the cast, is a tenor of excellent vocal attainment. Arthur Cunningham sang the role of the Marquis of Corneville in his usual masterful manner, and Miss Florence Wallace added to the vocal superiority of the organization as Germaine."

"Miss Florence Wallace" is the stage name of Miss Florence Wadsworth, formerly of this city. Her many friends here will be glad to know she is gaining such distinction in operatic circles.

She recently made a hit in "Makado" and "Il Trovatore."

Examination for colored teachers will be held in my office Friday and Saturday.

A PLEA FOR MERCY.

"I have a very sore back and am blind in both eyes. I have a set of decayed teeth, by which to masticate my food, although I have a fair appetite, but it doesn't seem to produce much flesh by which to cover my bone frame. The Humane Society would like to put me to rest, as I have done my share of work, and it gives me great pain to be hitched to this heavy cart. Won't the humane people of Mason county lend a helping hand? It will take only $15 to relieve my suffering."

If you care to help in this cause, please phone the Humane offices, 619.

BANKERS' CONVENTION

since our arrival in this good old river town.

Our meeting today is for the same purpose as the meetings that have been held in the past, and for the same purpose that they will be held in the future—to meet and renew old acquaintances and make new ones, and by careful consideration and friendly discussion of the questions and conditions confronting the banker in this time, to derive the greatest benefit from the good ones and suffer the least hardship from the objectionable ones.

Now, as many of you possibly realize, my remarks are simply the little curtain play before the main performance, and I think that in choosing this subject, "Maintaining the Standard," I was governed largely by the fact that it would look well on the program.

It is not my intention to try to tell older and more experienced bankers how to conduct the affairs of a bank; however, I think that the man in active charge of a country bank is entitled to just a little more than he is getting out of it, and I think it would be well for the banker in the rural district to take the necessary precautions to prevent present-day competition from robbing him of the sense of enjoyment and pleasure out of the business that it should give.

The country banker serves his customers faithfully and well and gives them practically all of his time; all of their reasonable and legitimate wants are taken care of by him under any and all conditions, and in return for this I think he is entitled to have the business transacted largely in his way—in view of the fact that this is the right way. This can only be brought about by the co-operation of the bankers in the community—not by local meetings and agreeing on certain franchised rules and regulations, but by the firm resolve on the part of each banker that he will demand that the regulations governing correct banking shall be carried out at all times, and that the banking business. In his community shall be conducted in such a way as to maintain the standard of dignified banking. Any benefits derived from departures from this way of banking are short-lived and invariably react to the disadvantage of the bank practicing them. If you lose a customer because of having required him to conform to the correct methods of doing business, you make for the bank that gets him a better customer; and if one comes to you dissatisfied because of having been compelled, by another bank, to comply with the same regulations, he makes for you a better customer. As an illustration of what co-operation, or rather mutual understanding, will do toward bringing about what the banker desires—I would suggest that in our town there are four banks that for years have had overdrafts averaging $40,000. Recently, under pressure from the department, we undertook to eliminate this objectionable practice. One of our banks set to work very energetically and within a very short space of time had actually eliminated overdrafts at that institution. The effort on his part made it very easy for us to do likewise—also the other banks of the downtown and out-of-town public. A statement to the department that the overdrafts of the banks of the town were less than $2,000, and I might mention that our institution had the big end of this.

It is not an uncommon thing today to hear a country banker, of middle age or less, complain of the grind of daily business, and the reason usually given is that under present conditions and present methods for meeting strong competition his business is a tax upon him at all times. This condition, in my opinion, is unnecessary and should not exist; it is brought about largely by the banker himself and, therefore, can only be remedied by him.

Much of the strenuously arising from supposed present-day competition is simply wasting energy in useless agitation on the part of the banker. There is room enough for all and, in my opinion, a little calmer presence and the ever-readiness to cooperate with your neighbor will serve to maintain the dignity of the business without loss to anybody.

The discussion of bank deposits is in a sense like the discussion of the state of one's health, the least said about it, the better for all concerned.

Further, many of the present-day conditions are simply wasting energy in useless agitation on the part of the banker.
